faire declaration

Both Agitated in Court. The two new comers plainly hoped to escape with fines also when they appeared in court to-day, although both were noticeably ill at ease. Henry, who is sixty years old, could hardly master his agitation. Benjamin, who has just turned thirty and who in appearance is the typical English dandy, was somewhat calmer. The clerk read the test indictment against the pair-an indictment charging a conspiracy to defraud the United tates by the secret importation of three valuable vases in 1908. Through Mr Stanchfield both men admitted guilt. A pirited tilt between the lawyers fol-

Mr. Stanchfield said his clients had been given to understand when they paid the heavy penalties imposed by the Department of Justice that there would be no criminal prosecution. Mr. Wise jumped up and hotly denied that he had ever entered into any such agreement. After a wrangle over this point the atorney for the men proceeded to make an extended argument to the effect that should be let go upon the payment of fines as in the instances of heir brothers.

H. J. Duveen in Bad Health. He said that as a result of nervous collapse following his arrest Henry J. Duveen was in such a state of health that even a short term of imprisonment might endanger his life. In fact, a specallet who had been treating Duveen on the other side warned his patient that the ocean trip and the excitement in court might produce serious effects.

As for the younger defendant, Mr.

Stanchfield pointed out that he had secome a partner only three months in the charge.
"I deny that there are moral, ethical or logical reasons why I should not de-mand that these swindlers go to jail." said Mr. Wise. "By their own admissions these two British subjects have been for years systematically engaged in a plot to defraud by means of per-jury theft and evasion the country which gave them protection. What they paid back was only a small part of what they had robbed this Govern-ment of. They deserve no mercy on that account. The older one was actually expecting that he would be Fines Mean Nothing. "The sate of health of one of then and the youth of the other are not exouses either. Any fines which may be inflicted would mean nothing to men of their wealth. There never were meaner or more contemptible amuggiers than these Duveens and jail is where they rightly belong."

He cited one case where he said the Duveens imported a Louis XVI. cabinet, ing it manufactured wood, and negecting to declare a great horde of al-nost priceless tapestries which were sidden incide it. Some of these tapesice, he added, now adorn the home of eorge Gould. When Mr. Wise had ended, Judge Marbens, with their lawyer, hurried out of he building.

Marie Rappold Sails.

Marie Rappold, the Metropolitan Opera inger, sailed for Berlin, Vienna and Carlsbed to-day on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse. She will sing at the first cities and take the cure at the ngs. She said that she would resprings. She said that she would re-turn in October to take up her operation work for the season. With her went her daughter, a little miss of eleven. When the mother was asked to pose for a photograph, the little girl de-clined to make it a family group. "It will make mother appear too old," and the child to the intense amusement the mother.

"Here he is," remonstrated Jenna as the smile left his face. I was not entered the brothers temporarily to withdraw their latest plea and in its stead substitute the original plea of not gullty. The bonds—$75,000 for eich—were continued until 19 o'clock in the morning.

The English Duveens came back rather unexpectedly from London resterday. The resident Duveens—Louis J. and Joseph J.—pleaded guilty some time ago and were fined $10,000 each. In addition the firm has paid back to the Government a total of $1,180,000 as restitution for duties on antiques and works of art which were brought into the country clandestinely or under take declarations.
